Die Martis 13 Martii, 1704.

WE Your Majesties most Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Assembled, are under an unavoidable Necessity of making our Humble Application to Your Majesty, upon an Occasion, which as it is very Grievous to us, so we fear it may be Uneasie to Your Majesty: But the Proceedings of the House of Commons, in Relation to Five Burgeses of the Town of Aylesbury, John Paty, John Oviat, John Paton, Henry Bass and Daniel Horne, have been so very Extraordinary, and the Consequences of such Proceedings may prove so Fatal to the Properties and Liberties of the People of England, and so directly tend to the Interruption of the Course of Justice, to the Eluding the Judicature of Parliament, and to the Diminution of Your Royal Prerogative, that we cannot Answer it to Your Majesty, to the Kingdom, and to our selves, without setting them before You in a due Light.

One Matthew Abby, a Burgess of the Borough of Aylesbury, brought an Action upon the Case at Common-Law, against the Constables of the Town of Aylesbury, (being the proper Officers to Return Members to serve in Parliament for that Place) for having by Contivance Fraudulently and Maliciously hindred him to give his Vote at an Election.

In this Action a Verdict was found for him; But Judgment was given against him in Your Majesties Court of Queen's-Bench, which was Reversed upon a Writ of Error brought in Parliament, where he obtained Judgment to Recover his Damages for the Injury, and afterwards had Execution upon that Judgment.

The Five Persons above-named being Burgeses of the same Borough, and having (as they conceived) had the like wrong done them by the Constables there, and supposing the Law to be equally Open to all Englishmen, did severally Commence, and Prosecute Actions against those Officers, in order to Recover their Damages.

And for so doing, they were sent for to the Bar of the House of Commons, and Committed Prisoners to Newgate, the Fifth Day of December last, during the Pleasure of the House of Commons, as having Acted contrary to the Declaration, in Contempt of the Jurisdiction, and in Breach of the Priviledges of that House.

These Proceedings are wholly New and Unprecedented. It is the Birth-right of every Englishman, who apprehends himself to be Injured, to seek for Redress in Your Majesties Courts of Justice: And if there be any Power can Controul this Right, and can prescribe when he shall, and when he shall not be allowed the Benefit of the Laws, he ceases to be a Free-man, and his Liberty and Property are Precarious.

The Crown lays Claim to no such Power; and we are sure the Law has trusted no such Authority with any Subjects whatsoever.

If a Man Mistakes his Case, in believing himself to have a good Cause of Suit when he has not, if he Mistakes his Court, by applying to an Incompetent Jurisdiction, he will fail of Relief, and be liable to Costs, but to no other Punishment; He is not Guilty of a Crime, nor is it a Contempt of the Court that has the proper Jurisdiction.

But these Men were Guilty of no Mistake, the Point of Law was settled by the Judgment of that Court, which is allowed to be the last Resort, and this will continue to be the Law, till it be alter'd by the Legislative Authority. They saw their Neighbour quietly and unmolested reap the Fruit of the Judgment he had obtained, and yet for pursuing the same Remedy, they are Condemned to an Indefinite Imprisonment, during the Pleasure of the House of Commons.

This Method does introduce an Uncertainty and Confusion, never before known in England. The most Arbitrary Governments cannot shew more Direct Instances of Partiality and Oppression. The Point of Law is Judicially Settled, and yet the House of Commons take upon them to Punish Men by Imprisonment, for Endeavouring to have the Benefit of what is so Established for Law.

We humbly observe to Your Majesty, That the first thing they Alledged in the Warrant of Commitment, as the Offence of these Five Persons is, That those Actions were brought contrary to a Declaration of the House of Commons.

It was never yet heard (when there was a House of Lords in being, and a King or a Queen upon the Throne) that the House of Commons alone claimed a Power, by any Declaration of theirs, to alter the Law, or to Restrain the People of England from taking the Benefit of it; Nor have their Declarations any such Authority, as to Oblige Men to submit to them at the Peril of their Liberty.

If they have such a Power in any Case, they may apply it to all Cases as they please; for when the Law is no longer the Measure, Will and Pleasure will be the only Rule.

The certainty of our Laws is that which makes the Chief Felicity of Englishmen; But if the House of Commons can alter the Laws by their Declarations, or (which is the same thing) can deprive Men of their Liberty, if they go about to take the Benefit of them, we shall have no longer Reason to boast of that part of our Constitution.

The next thing Alledged in the Warrant is. That the Commencing and Prosecuting these Actions was a Contempt of the Jurisdiction of the House of Commons.

Such a Jurisdiction was never claimed by the House of Commons, till upon this Occasion, and if this Novelty of a Jurisdiction be Founded on their New Authority of Declaring, they will Stand and Fall together.

The House of Commons have for a long time Exercised a Jurisdiction over their own Members, by Allowing or Disallowing their Elections, as they saw Cause. But they have never before Entertained a Notion, That they had a Jurisdiction over their Electors, to Determine (finally and exclusively of all other Courts) the particular Rights of those to whom they owe their Being.

Your Majesties Royal Writ Commands, That the several Electors make Choice of Persons to Represent them in Parliament, in order to Do and Consent to such Things as should be Ordained there, Relating to the State and Defence of the Kingdom and the Church, for which the Parliament is called: And they Obey the Command in proceeding to Choose Members for the Parliament then Summoned; but neither the Writ which requires them to Choose, nor the Indenture by which the Return is made, Import any thing whereby it may be inferr'd, That the Electors put into the Power of their Representatives their several Rights of Election; to be finally Disposed of at their Pleasure.

It was an Interest vested in them by Law before the Election, and which the Law will preserve to them, to be Exercised again in the like manner, when Your Majesty shall be pleased to Call another Parliament.

It was not possible for the Electors to suspect, that such a Pretence would ever be set up by their Representatives, when in the Course of so many Ages, the House of Commons had never taken upon them to Try or Determine the Right of any particular Elector, unless Incidentally, and only in order to Decide a Question, of the Title of some Member of their own House to Sit amongst them.

The Right of Election is a Legal Interest incident to the Freehold, or Founded upon Custom, or the Letters-Patents of Your Majesties Royal Ancestors, or upon particular Acts of Parliament, and must be Tried and Determined like other Legal Interests: And this Consideration does manifestly shew the Absurdity of pretending, That such Rights can be Decided by the House of Commons, where there is neither a Power of Administring an Oath, in order to discover the Truth, nor a Power of giving Damages, which is the only Reparation the Elector is capable of receiving in such a Case. Therefore, if the Electors, when they are Deprived of their Rights, have no place to Resort to, but the House of Commons, the Right of Election would be a Right without a Remedy, which indeed is no Right at all.

And

And it is put into the Power of the Officers, who have the Return of Members to serve in Parliament, to Reject the Votes of as many Electors as they please, without being Liable to make any Reparation in Damages to the Parties ; which is a Notion not very likely to preserve the Freedom and Impartiality of Elections.

The Third thing Alledged against these Men in the Warrant of Commitment is, That by bringing these Actions, they have broken the Privilege of the House of Commons.

A Breach of the Privileges of Parliament is certainly a great Offence ; and of all others, the House of Lords ought to be the last, who should go about to Lessen or Excuse it, as having a like Interest with the Commons in the preservation of the Privileges of Parliament.

But however, it might seem the Interest of the Lords to be silent, while the House of Commons are setting a-foot new Pretences of Privilege, because they may share in the Advantage ; Yet we think it our Duty and our Interest to do all we can to preserve the Constitution entire, and not to sit quiet, when we see Innovations attempted, which tend to the Diminution of the Rights of the Crown, or to the prejudice of the Subject : Because the best and surest way to preserve the Rightful Privileges of Parliament, is to abide by those that are certain and known, and it is not in the Power of either, or both Houses, to create New Privileges to themselves.

It never was thought a Breach of the Privileges of Parliament, to prosecute an Action against any Man, who was not Entitled to Privilege of Parliament ; and therefore, since the late Constables of Aylesbury had no Title to Privilege of Parliament, at the time when those Actions were Commenced or Prosecuted, we cannot imagine upon what Foundation, the pursuing these Actions can be Voted a Breach of Privilege by the House of Commons.

It seems very necessary it should be known upon what Rule this pretence is grounded, That the People of England may be at a Certainty, and see some Limits set to the Claims of Privilege. To serve the turn, it has been said, There are Priviledged Cases, as well as Priviledged Persons, but no Instance has been produced whereby this Distinction can be applied to justify these Commitments.

Actions at Common-Law have been brought upon false Returns and double Returns of Members to serve in Parliament, as in the Cases of Sir Samuel Barnardiston, and Mr. Onslow, which proceeded to Judgment, and a Writ of Error was brought in One of them, and the Plaintiffs could not prevail in either of those Suits ; and yet it was never pretended, That the Commencing or Prosecuting those Actions, was a Breach of Privilege of Parliament, nor were the Persons concerned in them Imprisoned or Censured, though there was a much greater Colour for such a pretence in those Cases ; because the Question there directly concerned the Right of Sitting in Parliament, and consequently those would have been indeed Priviledged Cases, if any such Distinction had been once thought of in those Days : Whereas in the Actions brought by these Five Men, neither the Plaintiffs nor Defendants, were Members of Parliament, nor did the Actions relate in any manner to the Right of Sitting there.

The Opinion of the House of Commons at that time, was very different from what it is now.

When the Judgment of the Kings-Bench (where Sir Matthew Hale Sat then Chief-Justice) which passed in favour of Sir Samuel Barnardiston, That the Action was Maintainable, was Reversed in the Exchequer-Chamber, the House of Commons was so far from thinking it for their Advantage, to have their Members deprived of the Benefit of the Common-Law, That in the Year 1679, a Committee was appointed to enquire touching the Reversing that Judgment, and by whose Procurement and Solicitation, and by what Ways and Means, the same was Reversed, and the Names of the particular Judges that were concerned : And when afterwards that Judgment in the Exchequer Chamber was Affirmed in Parliament, the House of Commons never thought themselves secure against the Corruptions of the Officers, who were to take the Poll, and make Return at Elections, till they had got an Act in the Seventh and Eighth Year of the late King, which gave a Remedy in Westminster Hall for False and Double Returns ; so little contented were they in their own Cases with the Jurisdiction of the House of Commons, and the Remedy to be had there, which now they so fiercely contend, their Electors should entirely Acquiesce in : And we cannot but think it manifest Partiality in those Gentlemen, to go about by such violent Means, to deprive their Electors of Recovering of Damages, when they are wrong'd in being deprived of giving Votes, since they thought it necessary for themselves to have that Advantage, when they are injured in their own Elections.

The Sufferings of these Unfortunate Men have not ended here, and the Rights of the Free-Born Subjects of England, have received a further and no less dangerous Wound in their Persons.

These Five Men having endured a long and chargeable Imprisonment, and despairing of their Liberty any other way, were Advised to Sue out Writs of Habeas Corpus Returnable in Your Majesty's Court of Queens-Bench, hoping to obtain their Discharge by the help of that Court, where the Judgment ought to be given according to the Laws of the Land, without regard to any Votes, or Declarations, or Commands to the contrary: But this Endeavour proved unsuccessful, and they were Remanded to Newgate by Three of the Judges of that Court, contrary to the Opinion of the Lord Chief-Justice Holt.

We shall not presume to offer any Opinion to Your Majesty, upon Occasion of this Judgment, at present, because it is not regularly brought before the House; And we only mention it, because the House of Commons took such Offence at the bringing these Writs of Habeas Corpus, That on the Twenty-fourth of February last, they Voted, That whoever had Abetted, Promoted, Countenanced or Assisted, the Prosecution of those Writs, were Disturbers of the Peace of the Kingdom, and had endeavoured, as far as in them lay, to Overthrow the Rights and Privileges of the Commons in Parliament.

This is a very heavy Charge, and if it be so Criminal a thing for a Prisoner to pray a Habeas Corpus, it does not only affect those who are at present concerned, but ought to touch every Commoner of England, in the most sensible manner.

Liberty of Person is of all Rights the most Valuable, and of which, above all other things, the Law of England is most Tender, and has Guarded with the greatest Care, having provided Writs of several kinds, for the Relief of Men restrained of their Liberty upon any Pretence, or by any Power whatsoever; that so in every Case they may have some Place to Resort to, where an Account may be taken of the reason and manner of the Imprisonment, and the Subject may find a proper Relief according to his Case.

No Crime whatsoever does put an Englishman into so miserable a Condition, That he may not endeavour, in the Methods of Law, to obtain his Liberty; That he may not by his Friends and Agents Sue out a Habeas Corpus, and have the Assistance of Solicitors and Counsel, to Plead his Cause before the Court where he is to be brought.

The Court is bound by the Law to Assign him Counsel, if there be Occasion, and to give Judgment upon his Case, as it stands upon the Return of the Habeas Corpus, and to Remand, Discharge, or Bail the Prisoner, as the Cause of his Commitment appears there sufficient or insufficient in Law. And if what is Alleged as the Cause of Imprisonment appears to be no Crime in Law, it is not the Authority of those who made the Commitment that can excuse that Court for Remanding the Prisoner.

This is the Law of England: But according to these Resolutions of the House of Commons, if a Man has the Unhappiness (tho' through Ignorance or Mistake) to do an Act which shall be Voted a Breach of Privilege, he becomes in a worse Condition than any Felon or Traytor; His Confinement makes it impossible for him in Person to Solicit and procure a Habeas Corpus, and if any have Charity enough to Assist him, or to plead for him, in order to shew to the Court the Insufficiency of the Commitment in Matter of Law, they become liable to lose their own Liberty, and are involved in the same Guilt of Breach of Privilege: So that let the Imprisonment be upon the most trifling Occasion imaginable, if it be by Order of the House of Commons, every Commoner must submit to it without Redress, no Friends can help them, no other Authority can deliver them, till Your Majesty shall put an End to that Session.

The Lords have as just a Concern, as the House of Commons can have, to Maintain the Authority, and Keep up the Awe of Parliamentary Commitments: And they will always do it, as far as Justice, and the Usage of Parliaments will allow.

There have been Cases, particularly that of the Earl of Shafsbury, where Persons committed by the House of Lords, even Members of that House, have Sued out Writs of Habeas Corpus, and upon the Returns of those Writs have been brought before the Court of Kings-Bench, and their Counsel have been heard on their behalf: And yet no censure ever passed upon them for these Endeavours to obtain their Liberty, or upon their Agents, Solicitors or Counsel. The

The House of Commons formerly acted with more reserve upon so nice an Occasion, as the Liberty of the Subject: For in the Year 1680, when a Writ of Habeas Corpus was served upon the Serjeant at Arms attending the House of Commons, in the behalf of Mr. Iberidon, who stood Committed by Order of that House; After the House was made acquainted, That such a Writ was served upon their Officer, and had entered into very long Debates upon the Matter, they did not think fit to Interpose, nor to pass any Censures upon the Persons concerned in procuring the Writ, or in appearing in behalf of the Prisoner; But left the Serjeant at Arms at Liberty to obey the command of the Habeas Corpus, which he did accordingly, by carrying his Prisoner before the Judge, where the Habeas Corpus was returnable.

The House of Commons have in former Ages shewn a great and steady Concern for the Freedom of the Persons of their Fellow-Subjects: And upon their Petitions, many Excellent Laws have been made to protect Liberty against all unlawful Restraints by any Authority, even that of the Crown: But now it is insisted, that their own Imprisonments are out of the Reach of those Laws, and their Legality not to be examined.

In the Third Year of the Reign of Your Royal Grandfather, the House of Commons made a Noble Stand for the English Liberties, and shewed by undeniable Evidence, That the cause of the Imprisonment must be Expressed in all cases, that so it might appear, upon the Return of the Habeas Corpus, whether they were sufficient in point of Law.

It could not then have been imagined, That the Successors of these Men would ever have pretended to an Arbitrary and Unlimited Power of Depriving their Fellow-Subjects of their Liberties, or to Vote it to be Criminal so much as to enquire into the Validity of their Commitments.

There is another Occasion of Offence, which the House of Commons have taken against John Paty and John Oviatt, Two of these Prisoners, who thinking themselves wrong'd in their being Remanded to Newgate, by the Opinion of the Major Number of the Judges of the Court of Queens-Bench, humbly Petitioned Your Majesty for a Writ of Error, in Order to bring this Judgment before Your Majesty in Parliament: And it is certain the Subject is never Concluded by any Judgment, till he comes to the last Resort fixed by Law in that Case.

The House of Commons being Informed of these Petitions, came to a Resolution, which they laid before Your Majesty, That the Commitments of That House were not Examenable in any other Courts whatsoever; That no Writ of Error lay in this Case; And that as they had expressed their Duty to Your Majesty in giving Dispatch to the Supplies, so they had an entire Confidence in Your Majesty, That You would not give Leave for the bringing any Writ of Error.

The First Position in this Vote is very General, and the Consequences of it are plain, if the Commitments of the House of Commons are Examenable in no other place, then no Man in England, how Innocent soever, is secure of his Liberty longer than the House of Commons pleases; And Men may be allow'd at least to Wish that it were not so, tho' they may have a very high Opinion of the Justice of that House.

It has been held as an undeniable Maxim, That whoever executes an Illegal Command, to the Prejudice of his Fellow-Subjects, must be Answerable for it to the party Grieved.

Let it be supposed then, That an Action of False Imprisonment was brought against the Serjeant of the House of Commons, and that the Defendant justifies his taking the Plaintiff into Custody, by virtue of a Warrant of that House, and it appears upon the Face of the Warrant, That the cause of the Commitment was no crime in Law, and the Plaintiff Demurs, what must the Judges do in such a case? Will it be possible for them to avoid Examining into the Commitment, and so give Judgment one way or other? Or can it be pretended, That a Writ of Error may not be brought upon such a Judgment? And is not the Court, before which the Writ of Error is brought, under a Necessity to do Justice thereupon, as the Law Requires?

As to the Second Thing they have taken upon them to Assert, That no Writ of Error lies in the case? We Assert to Your Majesty with great Assurance, That by our Constitution the House of Commons have no Right or pretence to Determine whether that be so or not: The Right of Judging when a Writ of Error is properly brought, is by Law entrusted to that Court to which the Writ of Error is directed; and therefore we shall not at present say any thing to Your Majesty in an Extrajudicial way, and before the proper time, as to that point, Whether a Writ of Error brought upon a Judgment for Remanding Prisoners upon a Habeas Corpus, can be maintained.

Which way that Question will be Decided hereafter, when the Writs of Error are Returned into the Parliament, is not at all Material, in respect to the petitions of the Prisoners which now lye before Your Majesty : For unless Your Majesty be pleased to Grant the Writs of Error according to their Prayer, the Matter cannot come to the proper Decision in Parliament, and Justice will be manifestly Obstructed.

Whether the Writs of Error ought to be Granted, and What ought to be done upon the Writs of Error afterwards, are very different things. The only matter under Your Majesties Consideration is, Whether in Right and Justice the Petitioners are not entitled to have the Writs of Error Granted.

We are sure the House of Commons, in the Year One Thousand Six Hundred Eighty nine, was of Opinion, That a Writ of Error, even in cases of Felony and Treason, is the Right of the Subject, and ought to be Granted at his Desire, and is not an Act of Grace and Favour, which may be Denied or Granted at pleasure : So that as far as the Opinion of the House of Commons ought to have Weight in such a Question, (whatever the present Opinion of that House is) they then thought a Writ of Error was the Right of the Subject in Capital cases (where only it had been at any time doubted of.)

But that it is a Writ of Right in all other Cases, has been Affirmed in the Law-Books, is verified by the Constant Practice, and is the Opinion of all Your present Judges, except Mr. Baron Pres., and Mr. Baron Smith.

The Law, for the better Protection of Property and Liberty, has form'd a Subordination of Courts, that Men may not be finally Concluded in the first Instance : But this is a very vain Institution if they be left precarious in the Method of coming to the Superior Court.

All Suits are begun, as well as carried on, by the Authority of Your Majesties Writs; and the Subject has a like Legal Claim to all of them.

The Petition for a Writ of Error Returnable in Parliament, is only Matter of Form, and Respect to Your Majesty (like the Petitions which the Speaker makes in the Name of the Commons, at the beginning of every Parliament, for those privileges which they do not believe to depend upon the Answer to those Petitions) and is no more to be refused than any other Writ throughout the Cause.

To affirm the contrary, is to allow an Arbitrary Latitude to intercept Justice, and to make it depend upon Private Advices, and Extrajudicial Determinations, Whether any Causes at all shall be brought to Judgment before the High-Court of Parliament.

These things being Considered, how extremely Surprising is an Address from such a Body as the House of Commons, That Your Majesty would not give Leave for such a Writ.

And no less Surprising is what they insinuate, as the Reason of their Confidence in Your Majesty, that You would hearken to such an Address, That they have given Dispatch to the Supplies : They proceeded surely in the Matter of the Supplies with a Nobler Aim, for the Safety of Your Majesties Crown and person, and for the Delivering the Kingdom from the Oppression of French Power, employed to set an Unjust Pretender upon Your Majesties Throne.

These are good Reasons for Disposing of the Peoples Money. Their Liberties, and all that is Valuable to them, depend entirely upon the good Success of the War, and they have used in all Ages to part freely with their Money for the Defence of their Liberties and Properties, and the Removing of Grievances and Oppressions.

But this is the first time a House of Commons have made use of their having given the peoples Money, as an Argument why the Prince should deny Writs of Right to the Subject, obstruct the Course of Justice, and deprive them of their Birth-Rights.

On the Twenty sixth Day of February, the House of Commons proceeded to carry on their Resolutions to greater Extremities, and Voted, That the Gentlemen who pleaded as Counsel for the Five Prisoners, upon the Returns of the Writs of Habeas Corpus, and the Agents and Solicitors who assisted them, were guilty of a Breach of Privilege, and order'd them to be taken into Custody, which Order has been Executed.

This

This seems to be so great an Excess, that it is hard to find Words proper for Expressing it. When Cromwell committed Mr. Maynard to the Tower for assisting one Coney as his Counsel, upon a Habeas Corpus, a Celebrated Author expresses the Detestation due to such a Fact in these Words: "It was the highest act of Tyranny that ever was seen in England; It was shutting up the Law itself close Prisoner, that no Man might have Relief from, or Access to it."

But as strange and unjustifiable as this appears, we beg Leave to take Notice of another thing yet more irregular (if it be possible:) While the Matter was depending before Your Majesty upon the Petitions for Writs of Error; after the House of Commons had made an Address to Your Majesty, That You would not give Leave for the bringing Writs of Error; after Your Majesty had, by Your Gracious Answer, signified to them, "That this Matter relating to the Course of Judicial Proceedings was of the highest Importance; and therefore Your Majesty thought it necessary to weigh and consider very carefully what was proper for You to do; and after they had Voted to take this very Answer of Your Majesty's into consideration: The Day following they order'd the Five Prisoners to be removed from Newgate, and taken into the custody of the Serjeant at Arms attending the House of Commons; and this Order was Executed at Midnight, with such Circumstances of Severity and Terror, as has been seldom exercised towards the greatest Offenders."

Your Majesty is the only proper Judge how highly disrespectful this Action is to Your Royal Person and Authority.

But it concerns us to say, That such a Proceeding tends directly to the Depriving the Petitioners of that Justice which they were endeavouring to obtain by means of the Writs of Error.

While Your Majesty was deliberating how to put an end to a Matter, which they only had made difficult by an unreasonable Address, the House of Commons rightly apprehended, That Justice would prevail with Your Majesty over all other Considerations, and therefore (as far as possible to disappoint the Prisoners, of the Fruit they expected from these Writs of Error when granted) they Transferred them in the mean time to another Prison.

This Practice of removing Prisoners from one Custody to another, has been ever complained of, as manifest Oppression, and most evidently Destructive of the Liberty of the Subject: It is a Mischief provided against in express Words, by the Act made in the Reign of Your Royal Uncle King Charles the Second, For better Securing the Liberty of the Subject; That if any Person being a Subject of this Realm, shall be Committed to any Prison, or in Custody of any Officer whatsoever, for any Criminal or supposed Criminal matter, That the Person shall not be removed from the said Prison or Custody, into the Custody of any other Officer (unless it be by Habeas Corpus, or some other Legal Writ;) and this upon the great Penalties mentioned in that Act. The Penalties in the Act were New, but the Law of England was the same before the making it. The shifting of Men from one Prison to any other, while they are using Means in a Course of Law to recover their Liberty, is inexcusable Cruelty, and against the plain Rules of Natural Justice, for by such Artifices, Imprisonments however unlawful, might be made perpetual, and the Subject as he was at the point of being Discharged from one Prison, might be without end removed to another.

May it please Your Majesty, Your Dutiful Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, were so solicitous to avoid any thing which might give a pretence to interrupt the necessary and early Provision for the War, in order to improve the wonderful Successes God had given to Your Arms, That tho' they were sensible the Imprisonment of these Men, in the manner, and upon the pretences above-mentioned, was a manifest a tempt to Elude the Judicature of Parliament, and of pernicious Example to the liberty and property of the Subject, yet they forbore to take Notice of it, till they were in a manner enforced by Petitions from the Prisoners, presented the Twenty-fourth of February last, and by the unjustifiable proceedings of the House of Commons the same Day, which we have already mentioned to Your Majesty.

But then the Lords found it absolutely Necessary, to enter into a Consideration of the whole Matter, as it appeared to them; and upon the Twenty-seventh of February they came to the following Resolutions.

Resolved, That neither House of Parliament have Power by any Vote, or Declaration, to Create to themselves new Privileges, not warranted by the known Law and Custom of Parliament.

Resolved, That every Freeman of England, who apprehends himself to be Injur'd, has a Right to seek Redress by Action at Law, and that the Commencing and Prosecuting an Action at the Common Law against any Person who is not entitled to privilege of Parliament, is no breach of the privilege of Parliament.

Resolved, That the House of Commons in committing to the Prison of Newgate, John Paty, John Oviat, John Paten, Henry Bass, and Daniel Horne, for Commencing and Prosecuting Actions at the Common-Law, against the late Constables of Aylesbury, for not allowing their Votes in the Election of Members to serve in Parliament, upon pretence that their so doing was contrary to a Declaration, a contempt of the Jurisdiction, and a Breach of the privilege of that House, have Assumed to themselves alone a Legislative Authority, by pretending to Attribute the Force of a Law to their Declaration, have Claimed a Jurisdiction not Warranted by the Constitution, and have Assumed a New privilege, to which they can shew no Title by the Law and Custom of Parliaments, and have thereby, as far as in them lies, subjected the Rights of Englishmen, and the Freedom of their persons, to the Arbitrary Votes of the House of Commons.

Resolved, That every Englishman who is Imprisoned by any Authority whatsoever, has an undoubted Right, by his Agents or Friends, to apply for, and obtain a Writ of Habeas Corpus, in Order to procure his Liberty by due course of Law.

Resolved, That for the House of Commons to censure or punish any Person for assisting a prisoner to procure a Writ of Habeas Corpus; or by Vote, or otherwise, to deter Men from Soliciting, Prosecuting, or Pleading upon such Writ of Habeas Corpus, in behalf of such Prisoner, is an Attempt of dangerous Consequence, a Breach of the many good Statutes provided for the Liberty of the Subject, and of pernicious Example, by denying the necessary Assistance to the Prisoner upon a Commitment of the House of Commons, which has ever been allowed upon all Commitments, by any Authority whatsoever.

Resolved, That a Writ of Error is not a Writ of Grace, but of Right, and ought not to be denied to the Subject, when duly applied for (tho' at the Request of either House of Parliament) the denial thereof being an Obstruction of Justice contrary to Magna Charta.

These Resolutions were delivered to the Commons at a Conference, the Twenty-eighth of February, and they took time to consider of them till the Seventh of March, upon which Day, at their Desire, a Second Conference was had, and tho' it was too Apparent by what was delivered by the Commons at that Conference (which consisted of injurious Invectives against the House of Lords, and tedious Recitals of Precedents, in no sort applicable to the present Subject of Debate) that their Design was either to provoke the Lords to such a Degree, as might necessitate them to break off all correspondence, or by Engaging them in new Matters, to draw things to such a length, as might prevent the bringing these Debates to any Issue during the Session: Yet the Lords immediately desired a Free Conference, which was afterwards had with the Commons.

We are so desirous that Your Majesty should be made fully acquainted with all the passages relating to this Dispute between the Two Houses, that we Humbly beg leave to annex to this our Representation, what passed at the First and Second Conferences; and also (as far as we have been capable of recollecting in so short a time) the substance of what was said at the Free Conference, and in our Debates, in maintenance of the Resolutions of the House of Lords.

But we take it to be a Duty necessarily incumbent on us, to observe to Your Majesty the manner in which we have been Treated by the House of Commons at these Conferences; so that from thence Your Majesty, according to Your great Wisdom, may judge to what such proceedings do naturally tend. They told us, That the Judicature of the House of Lords was unaccountable in its Foundation, and inconsistent with the Constitution: If they mean it is so Ancient, that no account can be given of its Foundation, it is true, but there is reason to believe it began with the Monarchy, and we are sure it has continued without interruption unless during that Unhappy Interval, when a pretended House of Commons destroyed the Church and the Monarchy, as well as the House of Lords: As many Ages as the Constitution of the English Government has lasted, this Judicature has consisted with it, and formed a noble and necessary part of it, and therefore these Gentlemen will hardly be believed against so long an Experience, That it is inconsistent with the Constitution.

They

They also charged the Lords in direct Terms, with usurping the Hearing Appeals, with making Advances upon the Constitution, with contriving to bring Liberty and Property into the bottomless and Insatiable Gulf of the Lords Judicature, and with direct Reproaches as to the manner in which that Judicature has been exercised, and in the most contemptuous way told us, They forbore to mention the Instances, because they hoped we would Reform.

We desire no other Judge but Your Majesty, how such a Treatment of us becomes these Gentlemen, and we dare appeal to all Your Subjects for Witnesses of the Irreproachable manner of administering Justice in the House of Lords.

We hope the great Displeasure the House of Commons has conceived against us, may prove of some real Service, and of useful Caution to Your Majesty, for it has drawn them directly to own (what was but too visible before) that they are aiming at more Power, and a larger share of the Administration than is trusted with them by the Nature of our Government. They directly Complained, That by the Constitution, the Judicature in the last Resort, was not placed in the same Hands with the Legislature, tho' they cannot shew it to be so in any Country where the Government is not Arbitrary, and the Princes Will the Law. They have been long endeavouring to break in upon the Lords' share in the Legislature, of which we could mention too many Instances to Your Majesty. From an Ancient claim, That Aids to the Crown are to begin in the House of Commons, and that the Lords could not alter the Sums, they have of late Years pretended (but without any Reason, and against the known Usage of Parliaments) that we could make no alterations in any parts of a Money-Bill, tho' it have no relation to the money: And upon that Foot, when they have had a mind to get any thing passed into a Law, of the reasonableness of which they have despaired to convince the Lords, they have rack'd it to a Money-Bill, in order to put the Crown and the Lords, under that Unhappy Necessity, Either to agree to a Law they might think prejudicial to the Publick, or to lose the Money which perhaps at that Time was absolutely necessary to the saving the Kingdom.

By this Method they Assume to themselves the whole Legislative Authority, taking in Effect the Negative Voice from the Crown, and Depriving the Lords of the Right of Deliberating upon what is for the Good of the Kingdom: For this Reason the Lords had, in a very solemn Manner, Resolved never to suffer such Impositions for the future, let the Importance of the Bill be never so great. This Resolution was well known, and yet in this present Session (as appears by the Printed Votes of the Twenty-eighth of November last) a great Number of the Gentlemen of the House of Commons, to the manifest Danger of Disappointing the Supplies of the Year, which must have been the Ruine of the whole Confederacy, and Delivering up of Europe into the Hands of France, made an Attempt to Tack to the Land-Tax a Bill which had been Rejected in Two precedent Sessions of Parliament.

Thus the House of Commons have formerly set on Foot several Attempts, against that share in the Legislature which is placed in the Lords: But this is the First Time they have Published their Desire, to be let into the Judicature of Parliament.

Whatever they would insinuate upon this Occasion, we desire not to meddle with the Choice of the Commons Representatives, we willingly leave that Matter where it is, and in what manner it is Exercised there; How Impartially and how Steadily is so well known by Experience to most parts of the Kingdom, and so universally understood, that the People will be extremely desirous their Estates and Properties should be Subject to such Determinations.

It is not strange the Free-Conference ended without Success, when the Commons came to it with such a Temper as appears by the Votes of the Eighth of March, made after they themselves had consented to the Free-Conference: If those Votes had been Published soon enough, it would have fully convinced the Lords, how vain a thing it was to Confer with them further upon the Matters in Debate at the former Conferences; For not Content with what they had done before, upon Information that their Serjeant had been served with Two Writs of Habeas Corpus returnable before the Lord Keeper, in behalf of Mr. Montague and Mr. Denton, Two of the Gentlemen who had been of Counsel with the Five Prisoners, they came to a Resolution, That no Commoner Committed by them for Breach of Privilege or Contempt of the House, ought to be by Habeas Corpus, made to appear before any other Judicature, and required their Serjeant to make no Return, or yield any Obedience to those Writs; and that for such refusal he had the Protection of the House of Commons.

It has been always held the undoubted Prerogative of the Crown, to have an Account of the Reason why any Subject is deprived of Liberty, and it has ever been Allowed, that by the known Common-Law, it is the Right of every Subject under restraint, upon Demand to have his Writ of Habeas Corpus, and thereupon to be brought before some proper Court, where it may be Examined whether he be detained for a Lawful Cause: And the Statutes made in the Reign of Your Royal Grandfather, and Your Royal Uncle, have Enacted, That in all Cases, Writs of Habeas Corpus be granted and obeyed by the respective Officers upon great Penalties.

But these Votes import a direct Repeal of those Laws, as to all persons Committed by the House of Commons.

It is no longer worth Disputing, Whether a Person Committed by them, tho' for a Fact which appears to be both Lawful and Necessary, may be Delivered by any Court; for by this New Law, he shall never be brought thither, and the Serjeant is not only Warranted, but Commanded openly to contemn Your Majesties Royal Writs of Habeas Corpus, brought upon the Act of the One and thirtieth of King Charles the Second, which is an Invasion of Your Prerogative never before heard of in England.

Your Majesty does not Claim an Authority to protect any of Your Officers for disobeying a known Law. The Habeas Corpus Act, in times of eminent and visible Danger, was in the Late Reign suspended by Acts of Parliament for some short time, and yet (so sacred was that Law held) that those Acts passed with great Reluctancy, and One of the Arguments that prevailed most for agreeing to that Temporary Suspension was, That it would be an unanswerable Evidence to all future times, that this Act could never be Suspended afterwards by any less Authority than that of the whole Legislature: But we live to see a House of Commons take upon them to suspend this Law by a Vote.

They Ordered, That the Lord-Keeper of Your Great-Seal should be acquainted with their Resolutions, to the end the Writs of Habeas Corpus may be Superfeded as contrary to Law, and the Priviledges of their House: They are contrary to no Law, but that of these Votes, which surely are none of the Laws the Lord-Keeper was Sworn to Observe. But yet he is to Act at his Peril. They have Ordered this Law to be Published to him by their Clerk.

The Lord-Keeper is a Commoner, and if he Disobeys, 'tis a Breach of Priviledge; And if they should carry it so far, as to Order him into-Custody, he may seek, but is not to have Relief from any Habeas Corpus.

We humbly beg Pardon of Your Majesty for this Long and Melancholy Representation, which we could not avoid, without being Guilty of Treachery to Your Majesty, and to our Native Country. The Five Persons immediately concerned are but Poor Men; but we well know Your Majesties Justice and Compassion extends it self to the Meanest of Your Subjects.

The Matters in Dispute are of the Highest Consequence: Your Majesties Prerogative, the Reverence due to Laws, and the Liberties and Properties of all the People of England are concerned, and at Stake, if these Encroachments prevail.

We do not pretend to Solicit Your Majesty to put a stop to these Innovations; Your own Wisdom will suggest the most Proper Methods: We have endeavoured to do our Duty, in Laying the whole Matter before You.

We humbly beg Leave so far to Resume what has been said, as to Present Your Majesty a short View of the Unhappy Condition of such of Your Subjects, as have Right of giving Votes for Choosing Members to serve in Parliament, which has been hitherto thought a great and valuable Priviledge: But by the late Proceedings of the House of Commons is likely to be made only a dangerous Snare to them, in case they who may be hereafter Chosen to serve in Parliament, shall think fit to pursue the Methods of this present House of Commons.

If they refrain from making Use of their Right in giving their Votes, they are wanting in their Duty to their Country, by not doing their Parts towards the Choosing such Representatives as will use their Trust for the Good of the Kingdom, and not for the Oppression of their Fellow-Subjects.

If the Officer who has the Right of taking the Suffrages, refuse to admit them to give their Votes, they must either sit down by it, and submit to be Wrongfully and Maliciously deprived of their Rights; or if they bring their Actions at Law, in order to Assert their Rights, and Recover Damages for the Injury (as all other Injured Men may do in like Cases) they become liable to indefinite Imprisonment, by incurring the Displeasure of those who are Elected.

If being thus Imprisoned, they seek their Liberty by Habeas Corpus (the known Remedy of all other Subjects) they do not only Tye their own Chains faster, but bring all their Friends and Agents, their Solicitors and Counsel into the same Misfortune with themselves.

If they think themselves to have received Injury by the Judgment upon the Habeas Corpus, and seek Relief by Writ of Error, (the known Refuge of those who Suffer by any wrong Judgment) all that Assist them in that Matter, are likewise to Lose their Liberties for it, and they themselves will be Removed to New Prisons, in order to avoid the Justice of the Law.

We humbly Conclude with Acquainting Your Majesty, That we have been informed by the Petition of Two of the Prisoners, that they have been long Delayed (tho' they have made their Applications in due manner for Writs of Error :) We are under a necessary Obligation, for the sake of Justice, and Asserting the Judicature of Parliament, to make this Humble Address to Your Majesty, That no Importunity of the House of Commons, nor any other Consideration whatsoever, may Prevail with Your Majesty to suffer a Stop to be put to the known Course of Justice, but that You will be pleased to give Effectual Orders for the immediate Issuing of the Writs of Error.

Her Majesties most Gracious ANSWER to the ADDRESS.

My LORDS,

I Should have Granted the Writ of Error desired in this Address; but finding an Absolute Necessity of putting an immediate End to this Session, I am Sensible there could have been no further Proceeding upon that Matter.

Ordered by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Assembled, That the humble Thanks of this House be Presented to Her Majesty, for Her most Gracious Answer, in which She has express'd so great a Regard to the Judgment of this House, so much Compassion to the Petitioners, and such Tenderness to the Rights of the Subject.

The Substance of what was Offered by the Lords at the First Conference with the Commons.

THE Lords have desired this Conference with the House of Commons, in order to a good Correspondence between the Two Houses, which they will always endeavour to preserve. When either House of Parliament have apprehended the Proceedings of the other to be Liable to Exception, the Ancient Parliamentary-Method hath been to ask a Conference, it being ever supposed that when the Matters are fairly laid open and debated, that which may have been amiss will be Rectified, or else the House that made the Objections, will be satisfied that their Complaint was not well-grounded.

Such Hopes as these have induced the Lords to Command us to acquaint you, That upon Consideration of the Petition of Daniel Horne, Henry Bass, and John Paton Junior; and also of the Petition of John Paty, and John Oviatt, Complaining to the House of Lords, That they have been Prisoners in Newgate for about Twelve Weeks, upon several Warrants signed by the Speaker of the House of Commons, bearing Date the Fifth of December last, for their having Commenced and Prosecuted Actions at Common-Law against the Late Constables of Aylesbury, for not-allowing their Votes at an Election of Members to serve in Parliament; Which Actions they acknowledged they were encouraged to bring, by reason of a Judgment given in Parliament upon a Writ of Error, brought in the last Session by One Asbby against White and others: And also representing presenting by the same Petitions, what had been done by them respectively, since their said Commitment, in order to obtain their Liberty ; and praying the Consideration of the House of Peers upon the whole Matter : And also upon Consideration of a Printed Paper, Entituled, The Votes of the House of Commons, signed with the Speaker's Name, and dated the Twenty-fourth of this Instant February, The House of Lords found themselves obliged to come to several Resolutions, which they have Commanded us to communicate to you at this Conference, and are as follows.

1. It is Resolved, by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Assembled, That neither House of Parliament hath any Power, by any Vote or Declaration to Create to themselves any new Privilege, that is not Warranted by the known Laws and Customs of Parliament.

2. Resolved, That every Freeman of England, who apprehends himself to be Injur'd has a Right to seek Redress by Action at Law ; and that the Commencing, and Prosecuting an Action at Common-Law, against any Person, (not Entituled to Privilege of Parliament) is no Breach of the Privilege of Parliament.

3. Resolved, That the House of Commons in Committing to Newgate, Daniel Horne, Henry Bass, and John Paton Junior, John Paty and John Oviat, for Commencing and Prosecuting an Action at Common-Law, against the late Constables of Aylesbury, for Not-allowing their Votes in Election of Members to serve in Parliament, upon a pretence that their so doing was contrary to a Declaration, a Contempt of the Jurisdiction, and a Breach of the Privilege of that House, have assumed to themselves alone a Legislative Authority, by pretending to attribute the Force of a Law to their Declaration, have claim'd a Jurisdiction not warranted by the Constitution, and have assumed a new Privilege, to which they can shew no Title by the Law and Custom of Parliament ; and have thereby, as far as in them lies, subjected the Rights of Englishmen, and the Freedom of their Persons, to the Arbitrary Votes of the House of Commons.

4. Resolved, That every Englishman who is Imprisoned by any Authority whatsoever, has an undoubted Right by his Agents, or Friends to apply for and obtain a Writ of Habeas Corpus, in order to procure his Liberty by due Course of Law.

5. Resolved, That for the House of Commons to Censure or Punish any Person for assisting a Prisoner to procure a Writ of Habeas Corpus, or by Vote, or otherwise to deter Men from Soliciting, Prosecuting or Pleading upon such Writ of Habeas Corpus in behalf of such Prisoner, is an attempt of Dangerous Consequence, a Breach of the many good Statutes provided for the Liberty of the Subject, and of pernicious Example, by denying the necessary Assistance to the Prisoner, upon a Commitment of the House of Commons, which has ever been allowed upon all Commitments by any Authority whatsoever.

6. Resolved, That a Writ of Error, is not a Writ of Grace, but of Right; and ought not to be denied to the Subject when duly applied for, (tho' at the request of either House of Parliament) the denial thereof being an Obstruction of Justice, contrary to Magna Charta.

In these Resolutions, the House of Lords have express'd that Regard, and Tenderneſs which they have always had, and will ever maintain for the Rights of the People of England, and for the Liberties of their persons; and also their Zeal against all Innovations, to the prejudice of the known Course of the Law, whereupon the Happiness of our Constitution does depend : And they hope, that upon Recollection, the House of Commons will be of the same Opinion, in all the Particulars Resolved by the Lords, and agree with their Lordships therein.

The Substance of what was offer'd by the Commons at the Second Conference with the Lords.

THE Commons have desired this Conference with Your Lordships, in order to preserve that good Correspondence between the Two Houses, which the Commons shall always sincerely endeavour to maintain, and which is so particularly necessary at this time of Common Danger, that the Commons would not engage in any thing that looks like a Dispute with your Lordships, were it not for the necessity of Vindicating from a Manifest Invasion the Privileges of all the that Commons of England (with which the House of Commons is intrusted) even those Privileges which are Essential, not only to the Well-being, but to the very being of an House of Commons, and the preventing the ill Consequences of those Misunderstandings, which if they are not speedily removed, must otherwise interrupt the happy Conclusion of this Session; and the Proceedings of all future Parliaments.

It was this Consideration alone, has so long prevailed with the House of Commons not to insist on due Reparation, for those Violent and Unparliamentary Attempts made by your Lordships upon their Rights and Privileges, at the End of the last Session of Parliament: But to apply themselves to the giving the speediest dispatch to those Supplies, which Her Majesty so earnestly recommended from the Throne, which are so necessary to Enable Her Majesty, to pursue the Advantages that have been obtained against the Common Enemy, by the Great and Glorious Successes of Her Majesty's Armes; And which are now Delayed in your Lordships House, in so unusual a manner.

The Commons do agree to your Lordships, That when either House of Parliament have apprehended the Proceedings of the other to be liable to Exception, the Antient Parliamentary Method has often been to ask a Conference; because it ought to be supposed, that when the Matters are fairly laid open and debated, That which may have been amiss will be rectified, or else the House that made the Objections will be satisfied, that their Complaint was not well-grounded. But your Lordships seems so little to desire to have Matters fairly laid open and debated, that to the great Surprize of the Commons; when your Lordships had invited them to a Conference, about some Antient Fundamental Liberties of the Kingdom, they found only the Antient and Fundamental Rights of the House of Commons, and their Proceedings censured, and treated in a manner unknown to former Parliaments; and that your Lordships had Anticipated all Debates, by delivering positive Resolutions: And these Proceedings of your Lordships, grounded only upon the Petitions of Criminals, that had fallen under the just Censure and Displeasure of the Commons; and upon a Printed Paper, which was not regularly before your Lordships.

Tho' this manner of proceeding, as well as the matter of your Lordships Resolutions, might have justified the House of Commons, in refusing to continue Conferences with your Lordships, as their Predecessors have done upon less Occasions; and tho' the Commons cannot submit their Privileges to be Determined, or examined by your Lordships, upon any pretence whatsoever, yet that nothing may be wanting, on their part to induce your Lordships to Retract these Resolutions, they proceed to take them into their Consideration.

Your Lordships first Resolution is, (viz.)

That neither House of Parliament, hath any Power by any Vote or Declaration, to Create to themselves any New Privilege, that is not warranted by the known Laws and Customs of Parliament.

As the Commons have Guided themselves by this Rule in Asserting their Privileges, so they wish your Lordships had observed it in all your Proceedings: This had entirely taken away all Colour for Disputes, between Her Majesty's Two Houses of Parliament, and many just Occasions of Complaint from those the Commons Represent; This would effectually put an End to that Encroachment in Judicature, so lately Assumed by your Lordships, and so often Complained of by the Commons, we mean the Hearing of Appeals from Courts of Equity in your Lordships House; This would have hindered the bringing of Original Causes before your Lordships, and your Unwarrantable Proceedings upon the Petition of Thomas Lord Wharton, Complaining of an Order of the Court of Exchequer, bearing Date the 15th of July, 1701. for Filing the Record of a Survey of the Honour of Richmond, and Lordship of Middleham, in the County of York: An Attempt which (contrary to the Antient Legal Judicature of Parliament, heretofore exercised for the relief of the Subject, Oppressed by the Power of the Great Men of the Realm) was in Favour of One of your own Body, to suppress a publick Record, which all Her Majesty's Subjects had an Undoubted Right to make Use of; An Attempt that tends to render all Fines and Recoveries, and other Records, (upon which Estates and Titles depend) Precarious, and consequently Subjects the Rights and Properties of all the Commons of England to an illegal and Arbitrary Power.

A due regard to the same Rule, would have prevented your Lordships Entertaining the Petitions, mentioned at the last Conference; which set forth,

That the Lords having given Judgment, in the Case of Astby and White, (viz.)

That by the known Laws of the Kingdom, every Freeholder, or other Person having a Right to give his Vote at the Election of Members to serve in Parliament; and being wilfully denied or hindered so to do, by the Officer who ought to receive the same, may maintain an Action in the Queens Courts against such Officer, to Assert his Right, and Recover Damages for the Injury: The Petitioners thereupon brought the like Actions in their own Cases;

Whereby an Extrajudicial Vore of your Lordships is stated as a Judgment of Parliament, and Standing Law in that Case, your Lordships having no Foundation for the Entertaining such Petitions, unless that, after having Assumed to your Selves the Hearing of Appeals from Courts of Equity, you would now bring Appeals to your Lordships from the proceedings of the Commons, who are not accountable to your Lordships for them.

Your Lordships Second Resolution is,

That every Freeman of England, who apprehends himself to be Injur'd, has a Right to seek Redress by Action at Law, and that the Commencing and Prosecuting an Action at Common-Law against any Person (not entitled to Privilege of Parliament) is no Breach of the Privilege of Parliament

To which the Commons say, That every Freeman, and every Subject of England, has a Right to seek Redress for any Injury; But then such person must apply for that Redress to the proper Courts, which hath by Ancient Laws and Usage the Cognizance of such Matters: For should your Lordships Resolution be taken as an Universal Proposition, all Distinction of the several Courts, viz. Common-Law, Equity, Ecclesiastical, Admiralty, and other Courts, will be Destroyed; And in this Confusion of Jurisdiction, the High-Court of Parliament is involved in your Lordships Resolution.

However, the Commons conceive it no wonder your Lordships should favour the Universal Proposition, That all Rights whatsoever are to be Redressed by Actions at Law, when your Lordships pretend to have the last Resort in Cases of Judicature, by Writs of Error; so that your Lordships are in this only extending your own Judicature, under the Colour of a Regard and Tenderness for the Rights of the People, and Liberties of their Persons.

The Commons are surprized to find your Lordship assert, That the Commencing and Prosecuting an Action against a Person, not entituled to Privilege of Parliament, is no Breach of the Privilege of Parliament, since it is most certain, that to Commence and Prosecute an Action, which would bring any Matter or Cause, solely Cognizable in Parliament, to the Examination and Determination of any other Court, is more Destructive to the Privileges of Parliament, than to Commence and Prosecute an Action against a Person only who is entituled to such Privilege.

That some Matters and Causes are solely Cognizable in Parliament, hath ever been allowed by the Sage Judges of Law, and is evident from many Precedents, and to bring such Causes to the Determination of other other Courts, strikes at the very Foundation of all Parliamentary Jurisdiction, which is the only Basis and Support even of that Personal Privilege, to which the Members of either House of Parliament are entituled; And consequently, to Commence and Prosecute any Action whereby to draw such Causes to the Examination of other Courts, is equally a Breach of the Privilege of Parliament, whether the Defendant against whom such Action is brought, is entituled to the Privilege of Parliament, or not; which, besides the Nature and Reason of the thing, is fully evident from the constant Usage of each House of Parliament in Committing for Contempts only against their respective Bodies, as appears from many Precedents upon the Journals of both Houses.

Your Lordships Third Resolution is thus, viz.

That the House of Commons in Committing to Newgate Daniel Horne, Henry Bais, and John Paton Jun. John Paty and John Oviat, for Commencing and Prosecuting an Action at Common-Law against the Constables of Aylesbury, for not allowing their Votes in Election of Members to serve in Parliament, upon pretence that their so doing was contrary to a Declaration, a Contempt of the Jurisdiction, and a Breach of the Privilege of that House, have Assumed to themselves alone a Legislative Authority, by pretending to Attribute the Force of a Law to their Declaration, have Claimed a Jurisdiction not Warranted by the Constitution, and have Assumed a New Privilege, to which they can shew no Title by the Laws and Customs of Parliament, and have thereby, as far as in them Lies, subjected the Rights of Englishmen, and the Freedom of their Persons, to the Arbitrary Votes of the House of Commons.

In Answer to which the Commons affirm, That the said Commitment is justified by Ancient Precedents, and by the Usage and Customs of Parliament, which is the Law of Parliament, and the the Rule by which either House ought to govern their Proceedings; And that the Terms of Assuming to themselves alone a Legislative Authority, of Attributing the Force of a Law to their Declaration, of Claiming a Jurisdiction not warranted by the Constitution, of Assuming a New Privilege to which they can shew no Title by the Law and Custom of Parliament, and of Arbitrary Votes, are more Applicable to this Resolution of Your Lordships, which hath no One Precedent to justify it.

According to the known Laws and Usage of Parliament, it is the Sole Right of the Commons of England in Parliament Assembled (except in Cases otherwise Provided for by Act of Parliament) to Examine and Determine all Matters relating to the Right of Election of their own Members.

And according to the known Laws and Usage, of Parliament, neither the Qualification of any Elector, nor the Right of any Person-Elected, is Cognizable or Determinable elsewhere, than before the Commons of England in Parliament Assembled, excepting such Cases as are specially provided for by Act of Parliament.

And were it otherwise, the Mayors, Bailiffs, and other Officers, who are obliged to take the Poll at Elections, and make a Return thereupon, would be exposed to Multiplicity of Actions, Vexatious Suits, and Insupportable Expences; and such Officers would be subjected to different and independent Jurisdictions, and inconsistent Determinations in the same Case, without Relief.

And the Exercise of this Power by the House of Commons, is warranted by a long uncontested Possession; And confirmed by the Act that passed 7 & 8 Geo. 3. Cap. 7. And the House of Commons must be Owned to be the only Jurisdiction that can allow the Elector his Vote, and settle and Establish the Right of it, the last Determination in that House, being by that Act of Parliament declared to be the Standing-Rule for the Right of Election in each respective Place.

Nor can any Elector suffer either Injury or Damage by the Officers denying his Vote: for, when the Elector hath named the Person he would have to represent him, his Vote is effectually given, both as to his own Right and Privilege and as it avails the Candidate in his Election, and is ever allowed when it comes in Question in the House of Commons, whether the Officers had any regard to it or no.

In the beginning of the Parliament held the 28 Eliz. Mr. Speaker acquaints the House, That he had received by the Lord-Chancellor Her Majesties pleasure, That she was sorry the House was troubled with the Matter of Determining the Choosing and Returning of Knights for the County of Norfolk; That it was Improper for the House to meddle in it, which was proper for the Lord Chancellor, whence the Writs issued out, and whither they were Returnable; That Her Majesty had appointed the Lord-Chancellor to Confer therein with the Judges, and upon Examining the same, to set down such Course, as to Justice and Right should appertain.

Nov. 9. A Committee was appointed to Examine and State the Circumstances of the Return of the Knights for the County of Norfolk.

And on Friday, Nov. 11. Mr. Cromwell Reports the Case of the Norfolk Election very largely, in which Report are these following Resolutions.

1. That the said Writ was duly Executed.
2. That it was a pernicious Precedent, That a New Writ should issue without the Order of this House.
3. That the Discussing or Judging of this, and such like Differences, only belong'd to the said House.
4. That tho' the Lord-Chancellor and Judges are competent Judges in their Courts, they are not so in Parliament.
5. That it should be Entred in the Journal-Book of the House, That the first Election is Good, and that the Knights then chosen were received and allowed as Members of the House, not out of any respect the House had or gave to the Lord Chancellor's Judgment therein passed, but merely by reason of the Resolution of the House it self, by which the said Election had been approved.
6. That there should be no Message sent to the Lord-Chancellor, not so much as to let him know what was done therein, because it was Derogatory to the Power and Privilege of the said House.

It also appears, That Sir Edmund Anderson, Lord Chief-Justice of the Common Pleas, was acquainted, That the Explanation and Ordering of the Cause, appertained only to the Censure of the House of Commons, not to the Lord-Chancellor and the Judges; And that they should take no Notice of their having done any thing in it.

Accordingly Mr. Farmer and Mr. Gresham were received into the House, and took the Oaths, being admitted only upon the Censure of the House, not as allowed by the Lord-Chancellor or the Judges, and so Ordered to be set down, and entred by the Clerk,

And this Right of the Commons to determine their own Elections; has never been disputed since the Case of Sir Francis Goodwyn, 1 Jac. 1. when the Lords would have enquired into the Proceedings of the House of Commons upon his Election; But the Commons then told their Lordships, It did not stand with the Honour of the House to give Account to their Lordships of any their Proceedings or Doings.

And in the Reasons of their Proceedings in that Case which they laid by Petition before the King, among other Things, they say, They are a part of the Body to make New Laws; yet for any Matter of Priviledges of their House, they are, and ever have been a Court of themselves, of sufficient Power to Discern and Determine without the Lords, as the Lords have always used to do theirs without them.

In which Reasons, as well as in their Apology afterwards to that Prince, the House of Commons did above a Hundred Years since, so clearly, and with so much Strength of Reason, assert their Rights in the Matter of the Election of their Members, that the Commons think it their Duty to resist all Attempts whatsoever to invade them.

And upon this Occasion it may not be improper to cite the Opinion the House of Commons had of the Judges Intermeddling in Matters of their Elections, as they have delivered it in the aforesaid Apology, in these words, viz.

Neither thought we that the Judges Opinion, (which yet in due place we greatly reverence) being delivered with the Common-Law, (which extends only to Inferior and Standing Courts) ought to bring any prejudice to this High-Court of Parliament; whose power being above the Law, is not founded on the Common-Laws, but they have their Rights and priviledges peculiar to themselves.

When the Earl of Shaftsbury was Lord-Chancellor, Writs issued during a Prorogation of Parliament, for Electing Members in the Room of those that were dead, the King himself was so cautious as to the Regularity of this Proceeding, and had so much Regard to the Priviledges of the House of Commons, that at the next Session of Parliament, 5 Febr. 1672, He spoke to the Commons from the Throne in these words:

One thing I forgot to mention, which happened during this Prorogation: I did give Orders for the Issuing forth Writs for the Election of Members in stead of those that are dead, that the House might be full at their Meeting; and I am mistaken if this be not according to former precedents: But I desire you will not fall to other Business, till you have Examined that particular; And I doubt not but Precedents will justify what is done. I am as careful of all your priviledges, as of my own Prerogative.

6 Febr. 1672. the House of Commons took that Matter into Consideration; and several Precedents being cited, and the Matter at large debated, and the general Sense and Opinion of the House being, That during the Continuance of the High Court of Parliament, the Right and Power of Issuing Writs for Electing Members to serve in this House, in such Places as are vacant, is in this House; who are the proper Judges also of Elections and Returns of their Members.

Thereupon it was Resolved, "That all Elections upon the Writs Issued since the last Session are void; and that Mr. Speaker do Issue out his Warrant to the Clerk of the Crown to make out new Writs for those Places; which was done accordingly.

No other Court than the House of Commons hath ever had the Determination of the Elections, or any Cognizance of such Causes, except where by Acts of Parliament directed: And such an Addition as those against the late Constables of Aylesbury, to bring the Right of Voting in an Election in question in the Courts of Law, is a new Invention never heard of before, which (as new Devices in the Law are generally attended with Inconveniencies and Absurdities) was plainly to subject the Elections of all the Members of the House of Commons to the Determination of other Courts.

This undoubted Priviledge and Jurisdiction, the Commons think will Warrant these Commitments, ments, if the late Declaration (which is agreeable to, and cannot lessen their Ancient Rights) had never been made.

For it is the Ancient and undoubted Right of the House of Commons, to Commit for Breach of Privilege; and the Instances of their Committing Persons (not Members of the House) for Breach of Privilege, and that to any Her Majesties Prisons, are ancient, so many, and so well-known to your Lordships, that the Commons think it needless to produce them.

And it being the Privilege, of the House of Commons to have the sole Examination and Determination of all Causes relating to their Elections, as aforesaid:

It follows, That any Attempt to draw such Causes to the Determination of any other Court, is a Breach of the Privilege of the House of Commons, for which the Person offending may be Committed by the Commons.

And here we cannot but take notice of that Unreasonable, as well as Unnatural Insinuation whereby your Lordships endeavour to separate the Interest of the People from their Representatives in Parliament, who pretend to no Privileges but upon their account, and for their Benefit; And are sorry to say, they are thus severely reflected on by your Lordships, for no other Reason but for their Interposing to preserve the Rights of the People, and their Liberties, from your Lordships Arbitrary Determinations.

Your Lordships Fourth Resolution is:

That every Englishman who is Imprisoned by any Authority whatsoever, has an Undoubted Right, by his Agents or Friends to apply for, and obtain a Writ of Habeas Corpus, in order to Procure his Liberty by Due Course of Law.

The Commons do not deny, That every Englishman, who is Imprisoned by any Authority whatsoever, has an Undoubted Right to apply, by his Agents or Friends, in order to Procure his Liberty by Due Course of Law; Provided such Application be made to the Proper Place, and in a Proper Manner: As upon the Commitments of the House of Commons, (which sometimes are not as other Commitments, in order to bring to Tryal, but are in Cases of Breach of Privilege and Contempt, the Proper Punishment of the House of Commons) the Application ought to be to that House.

The Commons are so willing to allow and encourage every Englishman to apply, by his Friends or Agents, to obtain a Writ of Habeas Corpus, in order to Procure his Liberty by Due Course of Law, that they have not Censured any Person merely for Applying for such Writ of Habeas Corpus, even in Cases where by Due Process of Law the Prisoners cannot be discharged: For the Commons must observe, That in many Cases a Prisoner cannot, upon a Writ of Habeas Corpus, obtain his Liberty, as in Cases of Commitment, in Execution, or for Contempt to any Court of Record, or by virtue of Mesne Process, or the like: And in the Act of Habeas Corpus several Cases are expressly excepted: And that no Person Committed for any Contempt or Breach of Privilege by the House of Commons, can be Discharged upon a Writ of Habeas Corpus, or by any other Authority than that of the House, during that Session of Parliament, is plain from the following Precedents:

23 May 1. Jus. I. Jmes the Prisoner to be sent for hither, and to attend his Discharge from the House.

That the Prisoners Committed by us, cannot be taken from us, and Committed by any other.

In May, 1675. The House of Commons having resolved; That there lay no Appeal to the Judicature of the Lords from Courts of Equity, and that no Member of the House should prosecute any Appeal from any Court of Equity before the House of Lords, Serj. Pemberton, Serj. Peck, Sir John Churchill, and Charles Potter Esq; were Committed to the Custody of the Serjeant of the House for Breach of Privilege, in having been of Counsel at the Bar of the House of Lords, in the Prosecution of a Cause depending upon an Appeal, wherein Mr. Dalmahoy, a Member of the House of Commons, was concerned. But the Serjeant having been by Force prevented keeping them in Custody, the Commons did, 24th June, 1675. Acquaint the Lords at a Conference, as followeth, viz.

We are further Committed to acquaint you, that the Enlargement of the Persons Imprisoned by Order of the House of Commons by the Gentleman Usher of the Black-Rod; and the Prohibition, with Threats to all Officers, and other Persons whatsoever, not to receive or detain them, is an apparent Breach of the Rights and Privileges of the House of Commons: And they have therefore caused them to be Re-taken into the Custody of the Serjeant at Arms, and have Committed them to the Tower.

The said Counsel were afterward Committed to the Tower, for a Breach of privilege, and Contempt of the Authority of the House: And the House being informed that the Lords had Ordered Writs of Habeas Corpus for bringing the Counsel to the Bar of their House;

The Commons then passed the following Resolution:

7 June, 1675. Resolved, Nemine Contradicente, That no person Committed for Breach of privilege by Order of this House, ought to be Discharged during the Session of Parliament, but by Order or Warrant of this House.

Resolved, Nemine Contradicente, That the Lieutenant of the Tower in Receiving and Detaining in Custody Sir John Churchill, Serj. Peck, Serj. Pemberton, and Mr. Porter, performed his Duty according to Law; and for so doing, he shall have the assistance and protection of this House.

Resolved, Nemine Contradicente, That the Lieutenant of the Tower, in case he hath received, or shall receive any Writ, Warrant, Order or Commandment to remove or deliver any person or persons committed for Breach of Privilege, by any Order or Warrant of this House, shall not make any Return thereof, or yield any Obedience thereunto, before he hath first acquainted this House, and received their Order and Directions how to proceed therein.

Ordered, That these Resolutions be immediately sent to the Lieutenant of the Tower.

Afterwards the Lieutenant of the Tower gave the House an Account, That he had refused to Deliver the Counsel upon the Lords Order, signified to him by the Black-Rod, because they were committed by this House: And that after he had received the Votes of this House, he had Writs of Habeas Corpus brought him to bring the Counsel to the House of Lords at Ten of the Clock the next Morning: And humbly Craved the Direction of the House what to do.

Mr. Speaker intimated to him he should forbear to return the Writs.

And the House came to several other Resolutions.

9th June, 1675. Resolved, Nemine Contradicente, That no Commoner of England committed by Order or Warrant of the House of Commons for Breach of Privilege, or Contempt of that House, ought without Order of that House, to be by any Writ of Habeas Corpus, or other Authority whatsoever, made to appear and answer, and do and receive a Determination in the House of Peers, during the Session of Parliament wherein such person was committed.

Resolved, Nemine Contradicente, That the Order of the House of Peers for the Issuing out of Writs of Habeas Corpus concerning Serj. Peck, Sir John Churchill, Serj. Pemberton, and Mr. Charles Porter, is insufficient and Illegal; for that it is General, and expresses no particular Cause of privilege, and commands the King's Great-Seal to be put to Writs not Returnable before the said House of Peers.

Resolved, Nemine Contradicente, That the Lord-Keeper be acquainted with these Resolutions, to the end that the said Writ of Habeas Corpus may be Superseded, as contrary to Law, and the Privileges of this House.

Resolved, Nemine Contradicente, That a Message be sent to the Lords to acquaint them, That Serj. Peck, Sir John Churchill, Serj. Pemberton, and Mr. Charles Porter, were committed by Order and Warrant of this House for Breach of the privilege, and Contempt of the Authority of this House.

22d March, 1697. Charles Duncombe, Esq; having been committed by Order of this House, and afterwards discharged by Order of the House of Lords, without the Consent of this House;

Resolved, That no person committed by this House, can, during the same Session, be discharged by any other Authority whatsoever.

Resolved, That the said Charles Duncombe be taken into the Custody of the Serjeant at Arms attending this House.

These are some Instances, among many others, that might be produced upon this Occasion: And the last cannot but be particularly remembered by some Noble Lords that then sat in the House of Commons, and strenuously Asserted this privilege of the Commons.

Your Lordships fifth Resolution, viz.

Resolved, That for the House of Commons to censure or punish any person, for assisting a prisoner to procure a Writ of Habeas Corpus, or by Vote, or otherwise, to deter Men from Soliciting, Prosecuting, and Pleading upon such Writs of Habeas Corpus, in behalf of such prisoner, is an Attempt of dangerous consequence, a Breach of the many good Statutes provided for the Liberty of the Subjects, and of pernicious Example, by denying the Necessary Assistance to the prisoner upon a Commitment of the House of Commons, which has ever been allowed upon all Commitments by any Authority whatsoever.

The Commons take this to be another Instance of your Lordships Breach of your own Rule, your Lordships being no Judges of their privileges; though by this Resolution, you seem to make a Judgment without having heard, and knowing what the Commons have to alledge for them.

This Attempt therefore in your Lordships is of dangerous Consequence, tending to a Breach of the good Understanding between the Two Houses, and of most pernicious Example. The Commons late proceeding in censuring and punishing the Counsel that have pleaded upon the Return of the Writs of Habeas Corpus in behalf of these prisoners, if duly considered, is a great Instance of the Temper of the House of Commons. For this House did not interpose when the prisoners applied to the Lord-Keeper, and the Judges to be bailed; and had the Lawyers shewn so much Modesty as to have Acquiesced in the Opinion of the Lord-Keeper and all the Judges, That these prisoners were not Bailable by the Statute of Habeas Corpus, the Commons had never taken any notice of it; but they would not rest satisfied without bringing on again this Case. And the privileges of the Commons were with great Licentiousness of Speech denied and insulted in publick Court, not with any hope or prospect of Relief of the prisoners. (who in this whole proceeding have apparently been only the Tools of some ill-designing persons, that are contriving every way to disturb the Freedom of the Commons Elections) but in order to vent these new Doctrines against the Commons of England, and with a design to overthrow their Fundamental Rights. And after so much Inveteracy shewn to the Commons, they could not do less than declare the Abettors, Promoters, Countenancers or Assistors of a prosecution so carried on, to be guilty of conspiring to make a Difference between the Two Houses of Parliament, to be Disturbers of the peace of the Kingdom, and to have endeavoured, as far as in them lay, to overthrow the Rights and privileges of the Commons of England in Parliament Assembled.

And the Commons in committing the Lawyers, have only done that Right to their Body, which your Lordships have frequently practised in cases of personal privilege, where any single Member of your Lordships House is concerned.

Your Lordships last Resolution, viz.

That a Writ of Error is not a Writ of Grace, but of Right, and ought not to be denied to the Subjects when duly applied for, (though at the request of either House of Parliament) the Denial thereof being an Obstruction of Justice, contrary to Magna Charta.

The Commons shall not enter into any consideration, whether a Writ of Error is of Right, or of Grace; they conceiving it not material in this case, in which no Writ of Error lyes; nor was any ever Writ of Error brought, or attempted in the like case before: And the allowing it in such cases, would not only subject all the privileges of the House of Commons, but the liberties of all the people of England, to the Will and pleasure of the House of Lords.

And when your Lordships Exercise of Judicature upon Writs of Error is considered, How unaccountable in its Foundation, how inconsistent it is with our Constitution, (which in all other respects is the wisest and happiest in the World) to suppose the last Resort in Judicature, and the Legislature to be differently placed: And,

When it is considered how that Usurpation, in Hearing of Appeals from Courts of Equity, so easily traced, though often denied and protested against, yet still exercised, and almost every Session of Parliament extended: It is not to be wonder'd, That after the Success your Lordships have had in these great Advances upon our Constitution, you should now at once make an Attempt upon the whole Frame of it, by drawing the choice of the Commons Representatives to your Determination: For that is a necessary consequence from your Lordships Encouraging the late Actions, and your countenancing a Writ of Error, which if allowed upon such a proceeding, might as well be introduced upon all Acts and proceedings of Courts, or Magistrates of Justice; and though the present Instance has been brought on, under the specious pretence of preserving Liberty, it is obvious the same will as well hold to controul the Bailing and Discharging Prisoners in all Cases.

And the Commons cannot but see how your Lordships are contriving by all Methods, to bring the Determination of Liberty and property into the bottomless and insatiable Gulf of your Lordships Judicature, which would swallow up both the Prerogatives of the Crown, and the Rights and Liberties of the people; and which your Lordships must give the Commons leave to say, they have the greater reason to dread, when they consider in what manner it has been exercised. The Instances whereof they forbear, because they hope your Lordships will Reform, and they desire rather to compose the old, than to create any new Differences.

Upon the whole the Commons hope, That upon due Consideration of what they have laid before your Lordships, you will be fully satisfied they have acted nothing in all these proceedings, but what they are sufficiently justified in, from Precedents, and the known Laws and Customs of Parliament; and that your Lordships have assumed and exercised Judicature contrary to the known Laws and Customs of Parliament, and tending to the Overthrow of the Rights and Liberties of the people of England.

Some of the Arguments that were made use of by the Lords in their Debates, and at the Free Conference, to maintain their own Resolutions, and answer the Objections of the Commons.

THE House of Commons made two Objections to the Manner in which the Lords proceeded at the First Conference: They said they had anticipated all Debates by delivering positive Resolutions, whereas this is the proper and ordinary method of Proceedings between the Two Houses; When one House has form'd an Opinion, they Communicate it to the other, to the End that if it be found Reasonable it may be approved, or if upon Examination it be disliked, the Causes of the Disagreement may be shewn, in order to convince the other House of their Mistake.

The Second Objection made to the Manner of the Lords Proceedings was, That the Resolutions were grounded upon the Petitions of Criminals, who had fallen under the just Displeasure of the Commons, and upon a printed Paper not regularly before the House of Lords.

As to the first part of the Objection, the Lords did (as just Judges always do) consider the Matter of the Petitions, and not the Persons of the Petitioners. And as to the Second part, the Lords said, The printed Paper mentioned by the Commons, was the Votes of the House of Commons, of the 24th of February, Signed by the Speaker. If the Commons had disown'd that Paper, there had been some weight in this Objection, but if they think it regular to Print and Publish their Votes to the people, the Lords will always think it regular to take Notice and make Use of those Papers, as they see occasion; and it seemed strange for the Commons to object to the taking Notice of their Votes, when the only colour they have hitherto pretended for their first Displeasure at the five Prisoners was, That they did not take notice of some Votes of theirs (which they call their Declaration) made during the last Session. And the Printing their Votes is the only Method they have yet taken, for the Promulgation of the New Laws they take upon them to make.

The Lords had no occasion to say any thing in Defence of their First Resolution, because the Commons did not think fit to Avow in Words, That they had a Power to Create new Privileges by their Votes, tho' they have manifestly attempted it in Practice, and particularly in the Case of the Five Prisoners.

As to the unjust Reflections which the Commons made upon the House of Lords, as if they had Entertain'd Original Causes, and were Guilty of some Encroachment in Hearing Appeals from Courts of Equity;

The Lords Avowed their Claim of a Jurisdiction, in Hearing and Determining Appeals from Courts of Equity, and could shew a continued Exercise of it more Ancient than the Determination of Elections in the House of Commons, which yet the Lords do not go about to call in Question ; But they deny their having meddled with any Original Causes, or that the Case particularly mentioned by the Commons, was at all of that Nature.

The Lords did not understand what the Commons meant, by saying, The Lords had founded their Second Resolution upon an Extrajudicial Vote. The Judgment in the Case of Abby and White, was given with great Deliberation, and founded upon undeniable Reasons and unquestionable Authorities : And the Lords Condescended so far in that Matter, as to direct the State of that Case, and the Grounds of that Judgment, to be Drawn up and Printed.

The Second Resolution of the Lords consists of Two Assertions. First, That every Man who apprehends himself to be Injur'd, has a right to seek Redress by Action at Law.

Secondly, That the Prosecuting Actions at the Common-Law, against any Person, not Entitled to Privilege of Parliament, is no Breach of Privilege.

What the Commons objected to the Universality of the First Part of that Resolution, as if it would destroy all Distinctions of Courts, and make a Confusion of Jurisdictions, did arise only upon a plain Mistake. The Lords mentioned Actions in General, without confining what they said to Actions at Common-Law, or affirming that Actions for all sorts of Injuries, may be brought in any one Court.

As to the Imputation that the Lords had no other Aim than to Extend their own Jurisdiction by the seeming Regard and Tenderness they shew'd for the Rights and Liberties of the People ; The Answer is, The only just way of Interpreting Mens meaning, is by observing what they Act.

The Lords have Acted with true Regard to Liberty and Property on this Occasion, as well as in all others : They have Voluntarily own'd themselves to be restrain'd, at the same time they desire the Commons not to go about to Create new Privileges : The Lords Claim'd nothing New, and the Commons cannot with Reason desire them to give up what the Law and the Constitution, have placed in them, the Judicature in the last Resort.

The Principal thing insisted upon by the House of Commons against this Resolution, was, That there are Privileged Cases as well as Privileged Persons, but they did not think fit to give any Instances of such Privileged Cases, as were any ways Applicable to the Matters in Dispute, that is, That were so entirely of the Conscience of the House of Commons, that the bringing an Action at Common-Law in those Cases was a Contempt to the House of Commons ; and unless that could be done this Distinction of Privileged Cases from Privileged Persons, will have no Weight to justify the Commitment of the Five Aylesbury-Men : If Men mistake and bring Actions in Westminster-Hall, for Matters Cognizable in Parliament, so that they can have no Relief in the Courts below, it does not follow from thence, that they ought to be Committed for Breach of Privilege on that Account.

The Determining of Elections is Admitted to be the Business of the House of Commons, and yet it is certain that the Prosecuting Actions at Common-Law for False or Double Returns, was never thought to be a Contempt to the House of Commons, nor was any Body Punished or Committed upon that Account, in the Cases of Sir Samuel Barnardiston, and Mr. Onslow.

The Freedom of Speech in Parliament is the most necessary and the most acknowledged Privilege of the House of Commons : And yet when an Information was brought in the Kings-Bench against Sir John Elliot and others, for Words spoken in the House of Commons, and Judgment was given against them in that Court ; the Commons did not think it sufficient to Condemn that Judgment by Votes of their own House, but brought those Votes up to the Lords, and desired their Concurrence, which was given ; and immediately thereupon a Writ of Error was brought in Parliament, and the Judgment regularly Reversed there : And it cannot be denied, that upon this Occasion the most Valuable Privilege of the House of Commons was brought under the Judgment of the Lords, as well in their Judicial, as in their Legislative Capacity.

The Case of Richard Strode, and the Act of Parliament which passed upon that Account in the Fourth Year of King Henry the Eighth, was that which was Principally insisted on by the House of Commons, in the Case of Sir John Elliot, for justifying their undoubted privilege of Freedom of Speech, and shewing the Injustice of what was done in that case by the Court of Kings-Bench.

The Case of Strode, might be Used by the Lords as another Instance to shew, That this Distinction of privileged Cases will not serve the Purpose of the House of Commons, to justify the Commitments of the Aylesbury Men. He was Prosecuted in the Stannary-Courts for Words spoken, and Bills offered in the House of Commons, in order to be passed into Laws, and upon that Account was Imprisoned and Condemned to pay considerable Sums, and Petitioned the House of Commons to be relieved in that Matter : The House of Commons did not then pretend to put a stop to those Suits, or to Commit the Persons concern'd in them, but thought the only Remedy against those Prosecutions and others of like sort, was to prepare a Bill in order to be Passed into a Law, for making Void the Judgments against Strode ; and took that Occasion by the same Bill to Declare the Law in General, and to give an Action to all Persons who should be afterwards Vexed or Molested for the like Causes, in which they should recover Treble-Damages and Costs of Suit.

There is no Case, that can more properly be called a Privileged Case, with respect to the House of Peers, than the Determining of Peerage, and yet if that Matter comes to be incidentally a point, in any Case depending in the Courts in Westminster-Hall, they must proceed to determine of it, as they think the Law to be ; And the Lords have not gone about to hinder it, nor found fault with them upon that Account.

The Courts in Westminster-Hall must of necessity judge of the Privileges of Parliament in many Cases : When any Person prays a Writ of Privilege ( which was always the way Antiently when Men desired the benefit of privilege, and it is often practised yet upon Occasion ) the Court where the Writ is prayed must Judge, whether the Party has Right to Privilege or not.

Suppose the Serjeant of the House of Commons should kill, or be kill'd, in the Execution of a Warrant of that House, upon an Indictment for Murder, the Court must necessarily judge of the Legality of the Warrant.

The Commons supposed Cases of Affronts to the Person of the Speaker, or of reproachful Words spoken of the whole House of Commons, as Instances of what they called Privileged Cases.

There is no Doubt, but either of these Cases would be Contempts, and such as might be punished by the House, but most certainly, these were also such Offences as might be prosecuted in Westminster-Hall : And if the Attorney-General should bring Informations upon them, it could never be pretended, that he would be Guilty of a Breach of Privilege of the House of Commons.

It was Urged, that in privileged Cases, the Votes of the House of Commons were like prohibitions to Ecclesiastical Courts, and that when prohibitions were served upon the Judges in the Admiralty, or Ecclesiastical Courts, it was a Contempt for them to proceed farther.

The Answer to this is, that Prohibitions to the Ecclesiastical and Admiralty Courts were founded upon a particular Reason : The proceedings in those Courts are according to the Civil or Canon-Law, and therefore it was necessary to preserve the Constitution, and Restrain those Courts from making Invasions upon the Common-Law, that a Guard should be set upon them, and a Power first to Restrain them ; and this Power is Lodged in the Courts of Westminster-Hall, who are trusted with the Issuing Writs of Prohibition, to the Ecclesiastical and Admiralty-Courts from time to time, upon Complaints made to them : And these Writs of Prohibition, must be served personally upon the Judge of the Admiralty, or the Ecclesiastical-Judges, who will be liable to Attachments if they proceed after such Service, until such time as they have shewn the Nature of the Suit to the Courts from which the Prohibition Issued ; and if the Suit be properly of Ecclesiastical, or Admiralty Consuance, the Court must Grant a Consultation whereby they are at Liberty to proceed again. This is a known and settled Method of Legal Proceedings, but the Votes of the House of Commons were never yet resembled to the Queen's Writs : No Court is bound to take notice of them, on the contrary the Judges are bound not to take notice of them, but to act according to the known Law ; no body has Power to Prohibit the Courts in Westminster-Hall, the Judges there are sworn to proceed to do Justice, notwithstanding any Command under the Great-Seal or privy-Seal, or by any other Authority whatsoever : And the Subjects of England have no longer an Inheritance in the Common-Law, if the Judges are to take notice notice of the Votes of either House of Parliament, and regulate their Judgments accordingly.

The Votes would not always be Uniform in either House, and it appears by the present dispute, that the Two Houses might often differ in Matters of Importance, and the Judges would be under difficulty which of the Houses to Obey: And if they yielded Obedience to both, they would be obliged to act very contradictorily.

What was said against the Third Resolution of the Lords was, First, That thereby the Lords took upon them to judge of the Commons Privileges: To this it was said, That if the House of Commons, under the Name of Privilege, would proceed to do things Inconsistent with the known Prerogatives of the Crown, with the known Privileges of the Lords, contrary to the Laws, or destructive to the Liberties of the People, the Lords were bound to tell them. These were not their Privileges. If by saying, they only are Judges of their own Privileges, they would deprive the Crown and the Lords from taking notice of Manifest Innovations, and Objecting to them, as there was Occasion, the Commons might take to themselves the whole Government without Controul.

They were challenged to produce Precedents to Warrant the Commitments of Men, only for proceeding in Suits at Law against those who had done them wrong, and had no pretence of Privilege.

The Lords did not dispute the Power of the Commons, in examining and determining the Elections of their own Members, nor of Enquiring into all Matters relating to the Determination of that Question, particularly their Examining into the Qualifications of Electors, and agreed that what they determined, would be binding, as to the Right of the Member to sit in the House: But that Determination would not bind the Right of any Elector, for he was no party to that Dispute of the Election, he was not heard for himself, nor was his Cause in agitation before the House; and the Action brought by the Elector, has no manner of relation to the sitting of the Member, but is only for Recovery of Damages upon Account of the particular Injury done him by the Officer at the Election.

Suppose there was a Contest about Two Persons, which was Mayor of a Town; the Court where that Cause was tried in order to a Determination of the Right, must perhaps Examine into the Rights of those who Voted; but would it be pretended, that the Electors would be bound by the Opinion of the Court in that Case, and that they could not bring their Actions to Recover Damages against the Officer who wilfully refused their Votes, however the Question was decided as to the Mayor: So that it was begging the Question to pretend, that because the House of Commons can Try the Right of the Member to sit, therefore they only have a Power to decide finally the Rights of the several Electors.

There is no Weight in the Objection, That if these Suits were Allowed, the Officers who are obliged to take the Poll, would be exposed to multiplicity of Actions.

The Law is so in all Cases of Elections of Officers: He who is to take the Poll, is bound to do his Duty at his Peril; If he acts with an honest Intention, tho' he should be guilty of a Mistake, he is in no Danger, for no Jury ought to find him Guilty: But if an Officer wilfully and maliciously refuses to admit those who have Right to give their Votes, every one of them may sue him in any proper Court as they see Cause, and the more he wrongs, the more he ought to suffer. And which would be the greater Mischief, That the Officer who does Injustice should be subject to Actions, or that he should be at liberty to reject as many rightful Votes as he thinks fit, without being liable to make any Reparation, and which is the part a House of Commons ought to take? The Lords observ'd, that the natural Order of things seem'd to be quite inverted in this Dispute; the House of Commons were taking part against the Freedom of Law, against the Liberty of Mens Persons, and against the Right of their Electors.

As to the several Precedents insisted upon, they conclude nothing to the present Question, every one of them relating to the Right the House of Commons Claims of Determining the Elections or Returns of their Members, which they are in the quiet Possession of; and the General Expressions which are found in the Relation of these Precedents, can be understood only with respect to the Subject Matter of those Cases.

The 18th Precedent in the 18th of Queen Elizabeth, is of a Double Return for the County of Dorset. Tho' the Lords do not deny, That such Cases are proper to be Determined by the House of Commons; yet this Precedent does not go far towards Asserting their Right, for in that Case the Second Writ was quash'd by the Chancellor and Judges before the Determination made by the House of Commons: And in the Citing this Precedent they have not rightly stated the Words of the Queens Message, or of the Resolutions of the House of Commons, as will appear by Sir Simon D'Awers Journal, and they could not say they had any Original Journal of that Case.

As to the Second Precedent they cited, which is the Case of Sir Francis Goodwin, in the first Year of King James the First, which they made Use of to prove their own Power of Determining Elections, and that they were not to give an Account of their Proceedings therein to the House: It appears by their own Journal, That they had not stated that Case fairly; and that in fact the Lords, at the desire of the Commons themselves, were Mediators between them and the King in that Dispute; and that the Commons at last yielded the Point, and notwithstanding that Determination in Favour of him submitted, That a New Writ should Issue for Choosing a Member in the Place of Sir Francis Goodwin. And tho' there be mention in the Journal of a Letter wrote by Sir Reginald Goodwin, desiring, That this Third Writ should issue; Yet that could make no difference in the Case, for it will not be pretended, That a Member could give up the Right of his Election, and the Judgment of the House.

The Precedent Cited in 1671, relates only to the Right of Issuing Writs for the Election of Members during the Continuance of the Parliament, the Ordering of which was Voted to be in the Power of Commons only, and is not at all disputed at this time.

The Lords never Disputed the Commons Power of Committing for Breach of Privilege, as well persons who are not of the House of Commons as those who are: The Question is only, Whether a Matter that has no Relation to the Sitting of any Member in Parliament, may be made a Breach of privilege, by being called so in a Vote, or having that Name given to it in a War- rant of Commitment: That is, in other Words, Whether they have Power to Create to them- selves new Privileges by their Votes; for they will never be able to prove an Usage of Com- mitting Rich for referring to Law in such Cases, and it will be hard for them to convince those who they Represent that this Arbitrary Oppressing Poor men, is or can be understood to be only an Interposing to preserve the Rights and Liberties of the People of England.

1. The Chamber did not deny the Lords Fourth Resolution, otherwise than by saying, That the Application was to be made to the proper Place, and that where the Commitment is by the House of Commons; there is no place to apply to for Liberty but that House.

...The House thought this to be a Position very fatal to Liberty, for it places an Arbitrary and Absolute Power of Commitment in the House of Commons. Tyranny may be in many as well as in one Person: The Thirty Tyrants of Athens carry that Name with as heavy an Imputation as any single Person.

But I have never said, That every Prisoner who brings his Habeas Corpus ought to be Discharged; or that there are not cases excepted out of the Habeas Corpus Act; what they insist on is, That a Prisoner brought before a proper Court by Habeas Corpus, where it does appear that he never has been Committed for a Crime in Law, ought to be Discharged by that Authority he was Committed, or by whatsoever Name the Fact is called in that Court.

and the Proceedings were attended by the Commons. Eliz. The Case of one Jones; but it was not known who he was, nor what the Case was nor who would have taken him from the Court, and therefore that was being put aside to draw any Inference: from such a Proceed-

And there hapning a Question at that time, Whether there might be a Bill of Appeals before the House of Lords, in cases where Members of the House of Commons were parties; This was so managed, that in about a Months time, Matters came to such a height between the Two Houses, that all Correspondence was at a Stand-still between them; and they proceeded to make such Votes, and to do such Acts day to day on either side, as they thought would most provoke.

The Commons cited some of these Votes which were passed in their House towards the height of the Contest, and the Lords might as well have cited other Votes of the same Lords, in Contradiction to them which were altogether as high, and are at least of as much Authority as those of the House of Commons: So that it is hard to imagine, Use there can be of citing such Precedents, which did occasion Two Prorogations after the other, and must always have as bad Consequences when ever they are Tol-

The House of Commons took the same Exception to the Lords Fifth Resolution; they did to their Third; That they therein made themselves Judges of the Priviledge of the House of Commons: And the Lords contented themselves with giving them the following Answer.

What the House of Commons said in respect to their Confusing and Punishing the Council, who Plead'd at the Queens-Bench-Bar, upon the Return of the Habeas Corpus on behalf of the Prisoners, seem'd very remarkable, That it was because they were not content as to Acquiesce in the Opinion of the Lord-Keeper and the Judges, that the Prisoners were not Bailable by the Habeas Corpus Act; and they would not have taken them, but because they would not rest satisfied, but would bring on the Cause again, till the Privileges of the House of Commons were with great Licentiousness of Tongue, contemned and Insulted in publick Court; without any hopes or prospect of Relief of the Prisoners, but in order to vent New Doctrines against the Commons.

It seemed to be a kind of Excuse for the Committing of the Cause, but it does not fort agree with the Votes relating to this Matter, which called in general Terms, it may be Cited for Precedents hereafter, for Committing the Cause ( with a good Reason, the Votes in 1675.) when these Secret Motives, which induced the House of Commons this Case, will not appear.

The Vote of the 24th of February, Ordered the Committee to Examine What Parts had been concern'd in Pleading upon the Writ of Habeas Corpus, and What was said Counsel in their Pleadings; and the Votes against the several Gentlemen of the 24th February, are, That by pleading upon the Return of the Habeas Corpus on behalf of Prisoners, they were Guilty of breaking the Privileges of the House of Commons: does not appear that there was any Complaint of what they said, at least there was no Vote against them for their Words; and indeed, if the Charge against them had been Words supposed to be spoken, it would have been a most unreasonable Proceeding to have hurried them into Custody, without ever bringing them to the House to hear their Accusation, or to be heard as to what they had to say for themselves.

Houses, and to disturb the Peace of the Kingdom : But after all that can be said, the Fact will only be, That Four Gentlemen, Lawyers by profession, Retained in a Case of Liberty upon a Habeas Corpus brought by Five poor Prisoners, did their Duty in their profession ; and for doing so, were themselves Imprisoned by the House of Commons, and denied the Benefit of the Habeas Corpus Act : And this the House of Commons call'd, Doing Right to their Body.

No Lawyer has suffer'd for serving his Client even against the Crown ; If the Learn'd in that Profession may safely open the Law when the Prerogatives of the Crown are in Question, it will seem very hard they should be punished for doing it in a Case of Privilege. To deprive Men under restraints, of Assistance of their Friends, exceeds the Severity of any Court but that of the Inquisition, the very name of which ought to strike all Catholics and Protestants with Horror.

The last Resolution of the Lords was not contradicted by the House of Commons, and therefore the Lords took it for granted, that as it was no longer contested, but that a Writ of Error is a Writ of Right, and not of Grace ; consequently, that the Commons did no longer insist upon that part of their Address, That the Queen would not give leave for a Writ of Error.

As to what was said by the Commons, That it was not material whether Writs of Error were of Grace or not, because they did not lie in the Case of the Petitioners : The Lords said, That whether the Writs of Error could be maintained or not in point of Law, was not of the Conscience of the House of Commons, nor the Matter in dispute between the Two Houses.
